PRISONER KILLED BY FEAR OF DEATH.

Strange Sequel to a Murder Committed Twenty-Five Years Ago.

PLEA OF GUILTY REFUSED.

Abject Condition of the Accused Man Moved the Judge's Heart -Robinson's Long Flight From Justice.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL. Helena, Ark., June 30.-When death found his way into a narrow cell of the county fall at this place one day this week and claimed Jim Robinson, alias John Harper, there ended an interesting murder case, the history of which extends over twenty-six years. Whether guilty or not, whether John Harper, as he professed to be, or Jim Robinson, wanted for murder in the first degree, the man died from fear of death, with abject fright protesting his innocence for by walting you may endanger your life. Get cured while proper treatment may still overcome your trouble. Don't put off consulting a responsible specialist, whose successful work entitles him to your confidence; by doing so at once you will be cured quicker and with less expense. Remember, I have devoted the best years of my life to the scientific investigation and study exclusively of to the last, four miles west of Helena.

Three at least who did not attend the meeting were old Alf. Washington, a young negro named Robinson and a friend of negro named Robinson and a friend of Robinson. The last named two went courting that night. It was in the fall of the year, and old Alf Washington, who was a thrifty negro, had considerable cotton in a cotton-house close to his cabin. So he was accustomed to sleep there to guard it.

On the morning following the "speaking" old Alf. was found in his cotton-house dying. He was weak from loss of blood. The lower haif of his face had been chopped almost off, and his lower jaw and tongue hung down on his breast. He was conscious, but could not articulate, could not tell who had dealt him the fatal blow, evidently with a pole-ax. dently with a pole-ax.

Colonel Clopton was sent for. He had all

"Was it this one?"
A shake of the head.

"This one?"
Another shake of the head.

Finally he was asked,

"Was it Jim Robinson?"

Washington at once showed great excitement, violently noticing his head and trying hard to speak.

Robinson's Flight.

Robinson was standing a short distance away from the awe-struck negroes that composed the crowd. At this incriminating turn of affairs he boiled through the tail cotton and escaped across the fields.

From that thirteenth day of October until the summer of 1896, a period of twenty-five years, Robinson was seen no more in this section. Then, one day last summer, two faithful old negroes who had remained on the Clopton place all these years, when in Helena—as usual for the negroes on Saturdays (their holidays throughout the South)—neticed a man whom they immediately took to be the long missing Robinson. It required but a short while to decide that it was their duty to report the matter to an officer.

They did report it, and in a few minutes the suspected man was under arrest and was taken before a magistrate for a preliminary hearing on the charge of murder in the first degree. The negro's tecror was pitiable. He was not able to bring forward any witnesses to prove his identity as John Harper, nor could he account for his whereabouts during the last twenty-five or even the last five years.

Four or five witnesses swore positively that he was Robinson. Colonel Clopton was one of these witnesses. The prisoner had just cause for fear. He could prove nothing, and the State's witnesses were unprejudiced and as reliable as men can be on a question of identity after twenty-five ing, and the State's witnesses were unprejudiced and as reliable as men can be on a question of identity after twenty-five years.

When given the privilege of questioning the witnesses, Robinson or Harper, completely gave up and could enly mep the perspiration that streamed from his forehead and helplessiy ask: "Did you say I was Jim Robinson?"

He was bound over to await the action of the Grand Jury, and was by that body indicted for murder in the first degree.

When Circuit Court sat in October and his case was called, Robinson, or Harper, compelety collapsed and was unable to appear before the court.

III From Terror.

It was thought that he was "possuming," but the county physician examined him and stated that the man was really critically ill from nervous prostration, caused solely by fear. The terrified man never afterwards recovered his herve or regained his strength, except partially. Then he began to slowly pass from worse to worse.

When the time approached for another term of the Circuit Court, with the prospect of his trial terrifying him anew, he again collapsed. An attorney had been appointed by the court to defend him, and he was advised to plead guilty to murder in the second degree, by consent of the prosecuting attorney.

So when the court was sitting in the April terra, the man whom fear was killing, was again summoned to appear to answer the charge. He was brought into court on a litter, an abject, pitiable object, and was about to enter a plea of guilty of murder in the second degree, when the heart of the Judge was moved with compassion.

"No." said Judge Hutton, "that man is when the heirt of the Judge was moved with compassion.

"No." said Judge Hutton, "that man is in no condition to enter any kind of a plea or to be sentenced."

Death had too plainly marked the man and was sure to take the punishment out of the hands of the court.

Accordingly, Robinson or Harper, still protesting that he was the latter, was returned to his cell in the juli to await the end. While there was a complication of several diseases, it is almost certain that his fear is responsible for his death, for, morose and listless, he would lie in his bunk week after week, refusing to get up or take any exercise, and naturally draining his system by his absolute inertia, making it impossible for his condition to improve.

SHORTAGE OF CITY FUNDS.

Officials Deplore Lack of Money for Improvements.

The heads of the various departments of the municipal government are much wrought up over the lack of money to carry on the work of the departments this Each city official claims that never before were improvements in his department so baddy needed, and that the pitifully small appropriation that is given him in the general appropriation bill as it now stands will be totally innedequate even to keep up repairs and current expenses, to say nothing of much needed improvements. Nor is this all. It is certain that many, if not all, of the appropriations as they now stand will have to be reduced before the bill becomes a law, for, as stated by Mr. Hodges, when it makes no provision for streets and parks, and after July 1 there will be not a dollar for the maintenance of the street and parks, and after July 1 there will be not a dollar for the maintenance of the street and park departments for repairs, improvements or any other expense connected with the streets and parks. The hole thus left in the bill is a considerable one. It is estimated that not less than $25,000 will be needed for those two departments so far unprovided for. In order to fill this hole other appropriations must be further reduced.

MONEY IN MISER'S ASH BAR

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
Plainfield, N. J., June 30.-William H. Plainfield, N. J., June 30.—William H. Knight, a farmer living near Oak Tree, three miles from Plainfield, attended the recent auction sale of property belonging to the late Henry Mellick, the aged miser, who died worth 100,000. He purchased six barrels of wood ashes for one dollar. When Knight dumped the ashes he noticed a parcel wrapped with brown paper. He opened it and was astonished to find a roll of greenbacks as large as his fist. Mellick, the miser, had a great fear of putting his cash in banks. Three years ago burglars found $1,000 in cash behind a movable stone in the cellar wall.

Eaton Barnard, the dead man, lived in Upper Alton for a number of years and engaged in several business enterprises there. He was not successful in most of these enterprises, and was put on his feet financially a number of times by his brother. He went to Kansas City a short time ago and engaged in the bleyele business. A few weeks ago he came to this city and lived with his wife for a time at the Grand Union Hotel on Eighteenth and Market Union Hotel on Eighteenth and Market streets. He left that place a few days ago and evidently premeditated suicide, as the following telegram was received by his brother Friday morning, saying: "Eaton is dead; come at once. Barnard came to St. Louis and, failing to find Eaton, took the latter's wife back to Alton. Before departing, however, he called on the police and asked them to locate his brother. Besides his widow, Eaton Barnard leaves two small children. The drug which caused his death was a small quantity of chloroform taken internally.

GRIZZLY PULLED THE ROPE. Posseman Lassoed Him and Got Into Serious Trouble.

time furnished as much excitement as though they had jumped the men for whom they were looking.

The posse was in Brown's Park. Hacking, Dennis and Dennis's son had just crossed en the ferryboat from the north to the south size of Green River, when a huge grizzly came over the hill in sight of the ferry. The Wyoming men saw the bear, opened fire on firm across the river and succeeded in wounding him. At the same time two boys, one the son of B. F. Dennis and one the son of Mr. Jarvie, started on horseback, but without weapons of any kind, to follow the bear, and succeeded in getting him to turn and show light.

In a short time two of the Rock Springs party had saddled up their horses, ferried the river and had caught up with the boys and the bear. One of them threw a rope over him. Bruin took it coully, and, seating himself on his haunches, commenced to draw in the slack of the rope with his forepaws, hand over hand. He was so strong that he drew the frightened horse right up to him, the rope being tied to the horn of the saddle, while the rider was peppering the bear's face with a 33-caliber revolver, which caused the bear to bat his eyes a little, but had no other effect.

The other boys, who stayed off a short distance, had a good laugh at the expense of the man who was being pulled in by the bear, but it soon began to look serious, and the rider was calling for same one to shoot. Just as he was getting too close for confort, the horse made a desperate plunge and got back part of the rope. Bruin commenced to haul in again, but before he had accomplished this he changed his mind, and to the relief of the man with the isasoo, he threw off the rope and started to run. The four horsemen circled sround him and the two revolvers made life very unpleasant for the bear. While these scenes were being enacted, two of Brown's Park men, hearing the shots, thought that a fight with the outlaws was in progress, and with Winchesters in hand, rode up and assisted in dispatching the unfortunate grizzly.
